Stone Forests.

Stone forests are found in various parts of the world. In many cases they are hardened by some peculiarity of the atmosphere and are found stand ing just as they were when clothed with green foliage thousands of years sgo. The Little Colorado river, in Arizona, has long been famous as a locality for such finds. At one place more than 1,500 cords of solid stone tree trunks, sections, limbs and logs were found by the government sur reyors. Most of them were silicified, many seven to ten feet in diameter and from twenty to eighty feet in height. Geologists say that the petrified trees of the Little Colorato were once covered with marl over 1,000 feet in depth. Some of the trees bave been changed to jasper and have assumed various hues; others resemble opal, and when broken open the core is often found lined with crystals of
